THE PROMISE OF COORDINATED CARE

Thriving in her community

"I was constantly in and out of the hospital. Now, I have the support I need to take care of myself."

Today, Karen is a volunteer for the Women's Peace and Freedom, sings for social justice for Grannies, and coordinates health fairs for her community. After years of struggling with mental illness, Karen is now able to live independently.

Karen recalls a period of her life in which she compromised her ability to leave her home. She spent two years and never left her room for multiple hospitalizations, and Karen was on medication regimens that worsened her condition. As Karen learned to live with the severity of her illness, she was able to join a Cal MediConnect program that helped her to join a Cal MediConnect program.

Soon Karen received a health plan, which she described as "a full package" that included diverse perspectives from a psychiatrist, her sister, and her goals of living independently.

Together, we can help her live her life on her terms.

THE PROMISE OF COORDINATED CARE

A Place to Call Home

"Living at home, my goal is to stay as healthy as I am today, or even improve my health."

— Josephine, age 75

Josephine has had a dream for many years to call the Northern California coast home. "I had been trying to move to the coast side community where she has an attendant to help her with personal care needs, a care manager to help coordinate things such as medical appointments and referrals to community services, meals in a dining room, and transportation. Through her health plan, Josephine's care also includes services to build her strength and help prevent falls. This is a big change from where she used to live — a two-year stay in a nursing home. Josephine says her new environment, "feels like freedom."

While in the nursing home, Josephine enrolled in Cal MediConnect, a new program in California designed to connect the financing and delivery of medical care and long-term services and supports. This program gave Josephine access to an interdisciplinary care team that helped her determine it was time to find a home where she could be independent and participate in the everyday activities she once took for granted — and that bring her joy. It took four months of planning, help with filling out financial and housing applications, and multiple team meetings to bring all the pieces together. Josephine was finally able to move to assisted living — which happened to be on the coast.

What is life like today for Josephine? She feels independent, yet knows she is not alone. Recently she fell and instead of calling 911, quickly, and immediately followed up with an x-ray. Josephine was in control of her plan of care, unlike when in the nursing home or in the exhausting cycle of emergency room visits and hospitalizations.

A coordinated care experience for Josephine means a partnership between a health plan and care management support that align systems to support her independence, well-being and living in the place she calls home.
